(Special Air-Mail Service)

London, November 22.
WITH OLD COMRADES

Lord Trenchard took a week-end off from the Metropolitan Police in order to spend some time with his old friends in the Royal Air Force. He received a magnificent welcome.

He was the leading figure at the twenty-first anniversary of that remarkable organisation, the Central Flying School, and spent Saturday evening with the Comrades of the R.A.F. Association.

Officers and men who had served under him loudly and repeatedly hailed him as "Boom," a nickname he acquired from his remarkably deep voice.

But perhaps nothing was more impressive than the spontaneous way in which they greeted him, when he was about to speak, with a sonorous rendering of "Old Soldiers never die!" Lord Trenchard sat back and shook with laughter.

PILOT IN TEN DAYS

Few people know by how narrow a margin Lord Trenchard managed to slip out of the Army to become an aviator. He was home on leave early in 1913 when he became attracted by the military wing of the newly formed R.F.C.

Could he learn to become a pilot he inquired. "Now old are you?" was the reply. When it was revealed that he would be 46 in ten days' time he was informed that he must qualify within that period or return to his regiment.

At that time the aeroplane was regarded as a highly dangerous machine. For a novice to go up except in the calmest weather was considered the height of folly. But Trenchard got his licence. From dawn to dusk he persisted during those ten vital days. It was an example of the pertinacity that helped him to bring the R.A.F. to its present state of efficiency.

MR. SHAW'S RARE DISTINCTION

Although there were loud calls for the author after the curtain, had fallen on "On the Rocks" on Saturday, Mr. Shaw would not show himself.

However, the audience had already taken one brief chance of cheering him when, during the interval, he was seen sprinting like a boy up the winding staircase which leads to the stage box at the Winter Garden.

Now that Edgar Wallace is no more with us, Mr. Shaw shares with Noel Coward the distinction of being the only authors whom a first-night gallery can recognise and will acclaim.

Unlike Mr. Coward, however, and still more unlike Mr. Wallace, and most of all unlike himself in other connections, Mr. Shaw shrinks from this form of publicity and never appears on the stage if he can help it.

THE PRIMATE'S VIGOUR

The Archbishop of Canterbury has been awaiting for some time the opportunity, which he hopes to take to-morrow, of raising the Assyrian question in the House of Lords. Though the matter has largely passed out of the ecclesiastical sphere, the Primate is deeply concerned to make proper provision for our smallest Ally in the West.

The Archbishop's activities have lately been more manifold than ever. It is indeed difficult to realise that he was recently so desperately ill that the gravest views of the outcome of his malady were entertained.

MIND CONQUERS MATTER

None is more surprised at the Primate's astonishing recovery than those who are nearest to him. They can account for it only as a miracle of the power of mind over matter. I am told that the Archbishop would barely admit that he was ill at all.

Only the other day, when an old acquaintance congratulated him on his complete restoration to vigorous health, he replied with the air of a man who had no recollection of a day's illness.

SOCIETY AT QUEEN'S HALL

That it is a fallacy to regard London as dull and empty on a Sunday was again demonstrated yesterday at the Queen's Hall. It was packed to hear Horowitz and the London Philharmonic Orchestra under Albert Coates.

Famous pianists had come to hear the Russian virtuoso, and from a social point of view it might have been a big night at the opera.

In Langham-place afterwards Rolls-Royce rubbed wings with Daimlers in luxurious procession.

ELGAR'S THIRD SYMPHONY

The serious state of Sir Edward Elgar's health has, I am told, prevented him for some months from making any progress with his symphony.

This was to have been dedicated to the B.B.C. and at one-time a first performance was projected for the winter season now upon us.

The symphony, however, is in so rough a state, consisting simply of sketches which no one but the composer could set together, that Sir Edward would have to enjoy at least six months of health in order to complete the work.

LORD ROTHERMERE AND AIR DEFENCES

Lord Rothermere to-day makes an appeal for a force of 5000 airplanes.

This is no new attitude for him. He has always been an airplane-maniac, and has constantly pointed out the importance of strengthening our air defences.

But the situation has changed, and the public mind is more receptive than it was. Perhaps I may put it that the meteorological conditions are favourable is likely to have a successful flight.

SIR ERNEST WILD'S WELCOME

Sir Ernest Wild, K.C., the Recorder, at the Old Bailey yesterday, told Miss Constance Colwill, a barrister, that he hoped as time went on to see more and more members of her sex at the Bar. Miss Colwill appeared to prosecute for bigamy a man who at one time was employed as a dining-room cashier at the Houses of Parliament.

THE BLIND MP.

One of the most regular attenders at the House of Commons is Captain Ian Fraser, the Unionist member for North St. Pancras. He lost his sight during the war, but despite this handicap he is one of the most efficient members of Parliament. He has an uncanny knack of finding his way about the House, even when crowds of members are standing about in groups. He has a seat reserved for him, and always seems to know whether this is temporarily occupied by another member or not.

THE PRINCE TO BE NEXT MASTER

Mrs. Percy Greenaway, late Lord Mayor of London, announced at the festival of the Printers' Pension Corporation last night that the Prince of Wales had consented to become the next Master of the Worshipful Company of Stationers and Newspaper Makers. The Princess, Sir Percy added, had thus again proved his interest in their trade as he had in the Corporation for some years past.

MONACO SUES MISSISSIPPI

For Default On Bonds 90 Years Ago

New York, December 18. The Principality of Monaco is lodging an application to the Supreme Court for permission to sue the State of Mississippi for the repayment, plus interest, of $100,000 worth of bonds on which Mississippi defaulted over 90 years ago.

Before the prosecution can proceed, the Supreme Court must annul the provision in the Mississippi Constitution of 1875 prohibiting the payment of bonds. A successful suit would doubtless be followed by enormous claims, especially by Anglo-Dutch holders of defaulted bonds of the southern States.—Reuter.

REICHSTAG FIRE TRIAL

Communist Demonstration in London

London, December 18. Two hundred Communists, including numerous women and girls, broke through a police cordon near the German Embassy yesterday, when demonstrators held a march protesting against the Reichstag fire trial. After their ranks had been broken, the police rallied and charged the crowd with batons, scattering them after a brief scuffle.

Later one of the demonstrators was permitted to present a petition to the Embassy demanding release of the accused.—Reuter.

THE CONTROL OF OUR ROADS

How Motoring Has Stimulated Road Improvements

Without the motor vehicle, the roads might still have remained in that state of stagnation to which the railways had reduced them. It is equally true that the widening, strengthening, and other work to which they have recently been subjected has not been without its influence on the growth of the traffic, nor on the conditions under which it is operated.

Some of the stages by which this change has been brought about, and some of the results to which it has given rise, were discussed by Sir Henry Maybury in his interesting presidential address to the Institution of Civil Engineers on Tuesday last. The subject is important, and could have had no better exponent. Sir Henry received his first important appointment in the local government service forty years ago, and since then as county surveyor, as chief engineer to the Road Board, and as Director-General of Roads at the Ministry of Transport, he has played a leading part in the development that has taken place. His account of what has happened is, therefore, written with full knowledge, and the views he put forward on how the situation which, as a result, has arisen, can best be dealt with must be listened to with respect.

ROAD FUND

Briefly, the argument is as follows: The coming of the motor-car quickly showed up the neglected state of the country's highways, so that local authorities were impelled by the force of public opinion to spend large sums on their repair. To relieve the ratepayers of the consequent financial burden, Parliament imposed a tax on private motor-cars, the proceeds of which were allocated to a Road Fund. This fund, which it was primarily intended, should be spent on dust abatement, was also used for improvement works, as distinct from maintenance, and by 1913 the latter had become the more important charge. It was, therefore, decided to divide all roads into three classes, and when this work of classification was taken up and completed, after the hiatus caused by the war, it became evident that road maintenance and improvement would have to be a national concern. The result has been that of the 176,791 miles of road in the country, 42,995 miles, or 24.3 per cent., are classified, and that the local authorities responsible for their maintenance receive grants from the Exchequer towards their upkeep. These grants amount to some £45,000,000 per annum, and their expenditure is entrusted to about 3,000 engineers. In addition, the necessity for relieving unemployment has led to reconstruction of 978 miles of existing first-class roads and the provision of 200 miles of new roads, as well as numerous bridges. It has also necessitated research into the relative value of the materials used and into methods of testing them, two points to which we wish Sir Henry had devoted a rather larger portion of his address.

INCREASE OF TRAFFIC

Another outcome of these changes has been that road traffic has increased by leaps and bounds. In 1932, the number of driving licences issued exceeded 2,750,000; statistics published this week show that this year motor traffic has increased by 11 per cent. over the figure of a year ago. This development has, however, been accompanied by the deplorable result that during the months of 1932 no less than 4814 vehicles were involved in accidents and 3,129 persons were killed. It is therefore evident that the progress which we have summarised is not without its disadvantages and that a problem, in whose solution the engineer can play a useful part, awaits urgent attention. Again, we think, rather unfortunately, Sir Henry did not deal in detail with this matter, as with his wide experience he might well have done, with benefit both to his hearers and to a wider audience.

He has, however, some suggestive comments to make on the future organisation of our highways, a subject which closely affects the pocket of every tax payer and ratepayer in the country. At the present time the roads are under the control of 1,431 statutory authorities. He asks, therefore, how long it will be before the examples of electricity supply, railways, and even London transport are followed and a central board, which would be self-supporting, will be established. It is a question to which the answer is not simple, and there may be doubt as to whether consolidation which is now so popular is the best way to deal with it.—Engineering.

A WEEK OF BRITISH FLYING NEWS

Bermuda—United States Service

Establishment next year of a regular air service between Bermuda and the United States, probable early elimination of the rail sector between Paris and Brindisi on the British extra-European routes and a hint of a change in the step-motherly attitude of the British postal authorities to air mail were salient points in Sir Eric Geddes' speech to Imperial Airways shareholders recently.

The United States-Bermuda service will be operated by Imperial Airways in conjunction with Pan-American Airways, a company that has been entrusted with the operation of long distance overseas American air transport services, and thus occupies a similar position to the British concern. It will provide the first link in one of the future transatlantic air routes of the future. The route farther north, going by way of Canada, must perforce be more tardy of development, because of prevailing weather conditions; Sir Eric Geddes stated that Canada is likely to be the last of the great dominions with which regular air communications will be established. In the meantime—and the march of aviation has falsified many too conservative forecasts Imperial Airways have made considerable progress in negotiations with the Canadian and Newfoundland governments. Certain understandings, he declared, had been reached. Both official and commercial aviation in Canada are in cordial touch with the British company.

Political objections to British aeroplanes flying from France into Italy along the Mediterranean coast have obliged Imperial Airways to send passengers and mails from Paris to Brindisi by train, causing inevitable loss of time. Now there is hope that the objections will be waived, and that soon British transport planes will be able to fly without let or hindrance from end to end of the Empire routes. "It is our belief," said Sir Eric, "that when we can do so, the service will increase in popularity and will gain in speed and convenience."

ADVANCE OF AFRICA SERVICE

He was able to talk in glowing terms of the results of the first complete year of working of the England-South Africa service. It has run with splendid regularity. Traffic has grown satisfactorily. The demand for aerial transport in Africa is remarkable; Sir Eric Geddes recalled that even before the new fleet of eight Armstrong Whitworth four-engined monoplanes was delivered to the Africa airway, the passenger traffic between Egypt and Central Africa had grown to the extent that the new fleet was of insufficient carrying capacity to deal adequately with it, and another rearrangement of the main Imperial Airways fleet was necessary. To-day, large Handley Page Type 42 biplanes work as far south as Kenya and the new monoplanes from Kenya to the Cape.

He recorded that mails carried on all of the British services showed an increase of 23 per cent. over the previous year and went on to say bluntly that the growth of this class of traffic "is seriously hampered by the policy adopted up to now, not only by our own Post Office, but also by other administrations." But apparently the dawn of reason is about to break. Sir Eric went on to say that "there are signs—I cannot go farther than that—of postal administrations realising that the air mail services are now being accepted by the public as a normal means of conveyance for mails, and that the public will soon demand that its first-class correspondence shall not be segregated for special treatment, and for special fees."

MOTOR JOTTINGS

ON THE ROAD

The 1934 B.S.A. Ten

The B.S.A. Ten is notable inasmuch as it represents the application of the Daimler transmission system to a low-priced car, so that the fluid flywheel and the pre-selector gear-box are brought within the reach of all. The model tested was the standard saloon priced at £200, which is £10 less than the cheapest saloon model of 1933.

The original design of the chassis provided a cruciform frame, underslung rear springs, and a flexibly mounted power unit, so that no great changes have been found necessary for the 1934 series. The gear-box is of somewhat larger dimensions, but transmission details in general are the same, the improvements mostly being in construction.

Horizontal louvres are used on the bonnets; there is a new rear apron and the back view generally has been improved. New type bumpers and hub caps enhance the appearance of what is now a very attractive example of an all-steel body.

An engine of marked refinement and a quiet transmission have made it desirable to study all sources of minor noises, with the result that even this comparatively cheap saloon car is extremely quiet and quiet free from those little noises which go unnoticed in a noisier car.

The more expensive models all have coach-built bodies and an 8-gallon petrol tank with reserve in the place of the 64-gallon tank on the all-steel saloon. The latter, however, is a very comfortable car, with good accommodation, and a simple but good interior finish. There is a sliding roof. Triplex glass is fitted all round, the separate front seats are adjustable, and foot-wells at the rear give ample leg-room and a natural sitting position.

ROAD IMPRESSIONS

The sturdy frame of this car gives pronounced steadiness on the road, and the Marles-Weller steering with transverse link is very light yet definite, while it possesses the feature of this type of not passing on road shocks to the steering wheel. The driving position is comfortable, and there is exceptional elbow room in the front seats, while there are of course no central controls; the hand brake being mounted on the right and being of the push-on type it does not obstruct the entrance when left on with the car stationary.

Both pedal and lever apply all four brakes, which are quite free from jerkiness, yet entirely adequate when the occasion arises. Starting on a gradient with the fluid flywheel is simplified of course by the fact that the car can be held on the fluid flywheel by means of the accelerator, thus obviating the operation of easing off the handbrake while accelerating which so many find difficult.

There is, indeed, no doubt that for the average driver this system of control makes for greater safety, as there is never any doubt as to being able to effect a change of gear in an emergency, while the accelerator control further simplifies traffic driving.

NEW "SPORTS" MODELS

X-Wise Chassis Bracings

The poppet-valve four-cylinder side-valve engine has found more favour, but the most interesting feature in engine layouts is centred in the new range of "Sports" models of 10-12 h.p. rating. Recent sporting events no doubt have greatly accelerated this development, which, however, is only mentioned in this survey as suggesting the higher all-round standard of average productions, since it may be assumed that the true "Sports" model is a refined replica of the standard product.

The question of frame stiffening also deserves mention in this connection. Many new models have the chassis frame braced X-wise about the middle, though the mode and position of the bracing differ. This and the associated use of live rubber for cushioning and insulating chassis components are factors indicative of the marked improvement in power acceleration and speed, and the equally important quality of deceleration which differentiates the new models from their predecessors.

Mention, too, may be made here of refinements in brake adjustment and of improved brake drums of special alloy cast from heat-treated steel, and other details.

The interests of owner-drivers have been studied in numerous details on this score, and there should be much less scope for complaints of inaccessible brake adjustment

MANSLAUGHTER BY MOTOR-CAR

How A Charge May Arise

Manslaughter has been defined as the unlawful killing of another person without malice either express or implied. An unlawful killing may be brought about in an infinite number of ways. The unlawful driving of a motor-car is one of those ways. Primarily motor-car offences are dealt with by magistrates, but where a prima facie case of manslaughter is made out the accused person is committed for trial by a judge and jury. A motorist may find himself involved in a charge of manslaughter (a) where he has unintentionally caused the death of another person by culpable neglect of his legal duty to be careful, or (b) where he has caused the death while he was committing a statutory offence. Both these aspects of his liability call for a little explanation.

There is a Common Law obligation upon everyone who uses a dangerous thing to take all reasonable care that he so uses it as not to cause injury to any other person. If he fails to take such reasonable care he is guilty of negligence. If as the result of his negligence someone is injured in person or property he may be compelled, in a civil action, to pay compensation. If as the result of his negligence someone has been killed the action may be brought against him for the benefit of the wife, husband, parent, or child who has suffered loss by the death. If the negligence which caused the death was gross he may be convicted of manslaughter. It is a little difficult to give a definition of gross negligence. A higher degree of negligence is required than that which would support a civil action. It must be something more than the absence of ordinary care—something in the nature of recklessness.

STATUTORY OFFENCES

The statutory offences with which a motor driver may be charged are contained in the Road Traffic Act, 1930. If while committing any of these offences a driver unintentionally causes the death of another person he may be charged with manslaughter, and if the case is proved against him he may be convicted of that crime. The offences, in so far as they relate to the ordinary owner-driver, are the following:—Reckless or dangerous driving; careless driving; driving elsewhere than on roads; driving when under the influence of drink or drugs.

A person is guilty of an offence under the Act who drives on a road recklessly, or at a speed or in a manner which is dangerous to the public, having regard to all the circumstances of the case, including the nature, condition, and use of the road and the amount of traffic which is actually at the time, or which might reasonably be expected to be on the road. This is a serious charge. For a first offence the driver may be punished, by magistrates, by the infliction of a fine, not exceeding £50, or imprisonment for a term not exceeding four months. On a second or subsequent conviction the fine may be £100, and in addition to the fine a term of imprisonment may be imposed. On conviction before a judge and jury the imprisonment may be for a term not exceeding six months. If while committing this offence a driver should be unfortunate enough to cause the death of another person, it may well be that he will be put upon his trial for manslaughter.

Careless driving consists in driving on a road without due care and attention, or without reasonable consideration for other persons using the road. The culpability is much akin to that which is found in an ordinary civil action for damages for negligent driving. The penalty for a first offence is a fine not exceeding £20, and for a second or subsequent offence a fine not exceeding £50, or imprisonment for a term not exceeding three months.

It is an offence to drive, without lawful authority, on to or upon any common land, moorland, or any other land not forming part of a road, or on any road being a bridleway or footway, but it is not an offence to park on land within fifteen yards of a road on which a motor-car can be lawfully driven. The punishment for a first offence is a fine not exceeding £5, and for a second or subsequent offence a fine not exceeding £10. The offence seems to be of a somewhat venial character, and the possibility of a prosecution for manslaughter resulting from its commission would appear to be remote.

INTOXICATED DRIVERS

Any person who when driving or attempting to drive, or when in charge of a motor vehicle on a road or other public place is under the influence of drink or a drug to such an extent as to be incapable of having proper control of the vehicle is guilty of an offence. This is regarded, and it may be thought quite rightly, as a serious offence. For a first offence the driver may be punished, by magistrates, by the infliction of a fine, not exceeding £50, or by imprisonment not exceeding four months.

TECHNICAL RESEARCH Accessories Show Very Little Improvement

Though there has been nothing of sensational import during the year concerning the metallurgical aspect of chassis design and construction, progress has been reported as regards research into problems of metals, and, in particular, those problems which concern performance and wear. In this good work credit is due to the Institution of Automobile Engineers and associated bodies for information and another reports of their research labours.

Developments in cast-iron with nickel and other alloys, and centrifugal-cast cylinder alloy-iron and steel liners of the dry and wet types; brake-drums with and without heat-treated liners, and renewable valve-seats; alloy and composite ferrous and non-ferrous pistons; and anti-friction bearing metals to withstand higher journal pressures are among the more notable of the year's trends.

As regards improved performance, reflected both by greater mileage between repairs and higher speeds and better acceleration, the year has given many proofs of the steady research that has been proceeding in respect of better fuel and lubricants. Much remains to be done especially as regards the development of the high-speed and light-oil engine, but as the marine section of the show will reveal, the problems on this score are mainly metallurgical in respect of weight reduction.

New accessories and fittings this year are not notable; first, because the modern car is replete with a group of standardised fittings which until recent years were "extras," or did not exist; and second, because of the trend towards simplifying dashboards and relying to a greater extent on self-functioning devices and automatic controls.

Research has been directed towards improving the ventilation of closed cars, and towards suppressing what remains of noise in the running of the well-kept car. Metallurgy is responsible to some extent for both improvements; the alteration of density in metals and alloys being reflected in deadening of "drumming" and noise.

The all-metal body has affected so largely motor characteristics, even for the more costly models, that changes of type must necessarily be limited by the cost of dies. Nevertheless, it is noteworthy of the confidence of makers in the stability of the market that some are interested in a reversion to types which are best described as open-closed or fully convertible models.

THROUGH NAZI EYES

Quaint Views On England

In view of the recent expulsion of a British journalist from Germany, on the ground that one of his reports, although apparently correct in every detail, was unpleasant to the Nazi authorities, it is of interest to study present-day German newspaper reports on England. The "Völkischer Beobachter," the leading newspaper of the Hitler Party, published on November 1, an exhaustive, but entertaining, essay on "British Mentality" as observed by its London Correspondent.

Much of the article, discussing the freedom of the Press in England and states:—

We (that is, the Correspondent) are far from wishing to criticize the English for the measures they take to ensure their military or political security, or to reproach them with their administration of justice or their defence forces. But we can ask them not to look upon the measures taken by the German Government and the conditions existing internally as if these were impossible in England. The difference is merely that in England things are never called by their real name.

English newspapers impress upon their readers daily that England enjoys complete freedom of the Press. Germany is cited as the prime example of a country where the exact opposite is the case; there the Press is "muzzled." Let us examine what this freedom of the Press amounts to in practice. There exists in England an invisible censorship of two kinds, the one exercised by the Government, the other by the Jews. Suppose that the Government is taking. Legally it has no power to interfere; "unofficially" it has all the more. The London newspapers appear in the early hours of the morning; they are dispatched by special express trains from Fleet Street (sic) in the heart of the City to all corners of the country. These special trains are organized by a Press association, which is mainly Conservative. If the Government wishes to call a given paper to order, this paper is simply excluded by the Press association and the special trains refuse to carry it. Its distributing system is paralyzed. The morning editions arrive late, subscribers cancel their subscriptions, and sooner or later the paper must eat humble pie and dismiss the editor who dared to criticize the Government too severely. There is no official censorship. Naturally not; still less is there any real freedom of the Press.

The article concludes by saying that the veiled censorship exercised by the Jews is dangerous to real freedom. It is brought to bear chiefly through the medium of the advertisements, which are practically all Jewish. The possibility of these being cancelled hangs like a sword of Damocles over every editorial department. Freedom of the Press? Freedom of Thought? It is the purest illusion. Perhaps these lines will provoke some foreigner to thought, and force him to recognize that the only difference in these matters between London and Berlin is that we Germans are accustomed to state openly "what is."

A STORY OF EVEREST

Sir Samuel Hoare's Tribute

The public interest in the assault on Mount Everest was amply proved at the first public lecture on the 1933 expedition, led by Mr. Hugh Rutledge at the Queen's Hall.

Mr. Frank S. Smythe, a member of the expedition, who has probably climbed to a higher altitude than any other living man, was the lecturer, and in a graphic narrative, punctuated by many humorous touches, he brought home to his listeners the tremendous ordeal that is presented by the ascent of Everest.

Sir Samuel Hoare, Secretary for India, who presided, expressed his great admiration for the courage with which the members of the expedition had faced the hardships; for the excellence of the organization; and for the victory they achieved over the brute forces of Nature, although they failed to accomplish their object.

Mr. Smythe's lecture was illustrated by photographic and cinematic views, which vividly reproduced the beauty and the dangers of the ice and snow-bound heights. Some of these remarkable scenes were photographed by Mr. Smythe during his singlehanded attempt to reach the summit of Everest, when he climbed to an altitude of over 28,000 feet.

He recounted that when he and his comrade, Shipton, passed the site of the Camp 8 of the 1924 expedition, at 28,500ft, they found an electric torch of British make, which lighted at the first press of the switch!

LECTURE ON "FLORENCE NIGHTINGALE"

Miss M. Fry To Speak At University Union

Under the auspices of the Arts Association of the University of Hong Kong a lecture will be given on Thursday, December 21st, at 5.30 p.m. in the University Union building, by Miss Margery Fry, on "Florence Nightingale."

Miss Margery Fry, J.P., M.A., L.L.D., came to China some three months ago on the invitation of the London Universities of China Committee, under the scheme whereby it is arranged for British men and women to visit and lecture in China, and for Chinese men and women reciprocally to visit and lecture in England. During the past autumn she has been visiting and lecturing in China, visiting inter alia Shanghai, Nanking, Peking and Tientsin. She leaves Hong Kong on December 23rd to proceed to Lingnam University Canton, after which she returns to England.

Miss Fry is a distinguished educationist and an authority on penal reform. She was for ten years (1904-14) Warden of University House, Birmingham and for six years (1928-1931) Principal of Somerville College, Oxford. During the war she was engaged on relief work in France, with the Quakers War Victims Relief Committee. She was Honorary Secretary of the Howard League for Penal Reform, 1919-25, and also served on the Universities Grants Committee appointed by the Treasury.

The lecture is open to the public.

MURDEROUS STAB

Farmer Attacked By Three Men

An attempted murder occurred in Shatin Village, Shatin at about 10.30 a.m.—on Saturday morning when the Yung Shau, a farmer, aged 63 years, was suddenly attacked by three men while he was standing in front of his hut after breakfast.

It is alleged that one of the men walked up to the farmer, and under the pretence of borrowing a light, he suddenly stabbed the victim in the head with a dagger.

The victim, however managed to cry for help, and on hearing the alarm the three men fled.

On being called, a large number of policemen from the Shatin Police Station arrived and had the victim immediately conveyed to the Kowloon Hospital for treatment.

It was afterwards reported that one suspect had been arrested, and enquiries are now being made by the Police.

The motive of the attack is not yet known but it is believed to be one of robbery.

A combination of frocks, sex-appeal, showmanship and difference should be an incongruity, but in Katharine Hepburn, it is not. The glamorous, vivacious featured player in RKO-Radio Pictures' "Christopher Strong" coming to the Central Theatre soon with Colin Clive, Billie Burke, Helen Chandler and Ralph Forbes in support, thrives on contacts.Clashing qualities constitute the secret of Katharine Hepburn's immense vitality and refreshing naturality on the screen.
Katharine Hepburn's appeal in courage, without which she could not have wrapped an armour of bravado around her when she was a child, and worn it gallantly as she swaggered through adolescence, shedding shyness for poise and grace.While other children grew up gracefully, without attracting undue attention, Katharine, because she was sensitive and shy, forced herself into a spotlight. It was an instinct for self-preservation which led her to demand attention, even though she dreaded it, and got it in her success. Her quick and dazzling stage career is well known.
And now in "Christopher Strong"
RKO-Radio Picture, Katharine plays her second screen role, and has already the leading featured part.An interesting compound of paradoxes is this slim young actress who can project more intensity by the turn of her head than many actresses can by turning somersaults.TO-DAY AT THE CINEMA

To CentralCharles Laughton, famous character actor, portrays the half-mad scientist, Dr. Moreau in "Island of Lost Souls" coming soon. Creator of beast-men he believes himself possessed of God-like powers.
Others in the cast of this fantastic
H.G. Wells' romance are Bela
Lugosi, as leader of the beast-men;
Richard Arlen, Lella Hyams and the "Panther Woman".Can life be created? H. G. Wells thinks so. The world-famed author who flowed the British scientific world more than a quarter of a century ago with his fantastic conception of men created from beasts was ridiculed, laughed at and mocked for his conception.Today perhaps, we are approaching the first, tentative steps to new horizons in the world of creative biology. And the authority for this is Dr. Raymond L. Ditmars, curator of the Bronx Zoological Gardens and renowned authority on animal life."Island of Lost Souls", and his panther-woman, in the fantastic novel, "The Island of Dr. Moreau", which has reached the screen as "Island of Lost Souls".Dr. Ditmars tells of an even more fascinating experiment—clothed in full reality, actually taking place at this moment in New York city."There is", Dr. Ditmars reports,
"an experiment in progress at the Rockefeller foundation by Dr. Alex
Carrel and his assistant, Dr.
Rosenberger, in which living tissue, taken from a chicken, has been kept alive, nourished, matured and its growth controlled for several years now—all by the invention of an artificial lung and heart, and the application of synthetic blood.""Wells is much like Jules Verne, went on Dr. Ditmars, yet Verne was closer to the truth of realization. Verne's conception of the submarine in his tale of the Nautilus has been borne out with amazing exactitude. Verne knew what was possible, and was more cautious than Wells. Today, the submarine is almost as fine a development as the Nautilus conceived in the imaginative brain of Verne.""Of Wells' idea, we have no proof", Dr. Ditmars stated emphatically. It is fascinating to contemplate, and undoubtedly irresistible as a story and picture. But not even in cross-breeding of the species of animals has there been any real success."In "Island of Lost Souls", Wells, through his mad scientist, Dr.
Moreau, shows how he believes jungle beasts may be turned into a form of man. Moreau's greatest triumph is the creation of his "Panther Woman", whose emotions are those of a woman, yet whose basic instincts are the jungle's.42ND STREET Splendid Picture At Queen'sHealth insurance was taken out by Warner Bros. on all of the first line chorus dancers in the mammoth dramatic spectacle with music and dancing, "42nd Street", which is now showing at the Queen's Theatre.A Hollywood epidemic of "fur" broke out during the production, and each girl's part was so important it would have been hard to replace her once she had started work; for each one had a definite place and represented a definite idea in the dance numbers.Not content with insurance, however, Busby Berkeley, who created and staged all the ensembles, placed the girls, 150 in all, under training rules as strict as for any football squad. A training table was established under the strict supervision of the studio doctor and dietitian.
The girls were put through regular exercises on the studio lot in the fresh air, in addition to their dancing exercises. The studio doctor kept a rigid tab on the girls, looking down their throats every morning, making them say "ah", and giving them homeopathic doses
if they showed the slightest signs of fever.Studio police were enlisted to keep an eye on the girls to see that they disobeyed none of the rules.
Special coaches were used to take them to and from the studios and their homes, and the girls were definitely warned that there was to be no night club life during the taking of the picture.So well did these rules work out that none of the girls were caught by the epidemic germs during the making of the dance numbers.

barked on a sensational theatricompletely around the world, and to virtually every spot on the face of the globe.The noted little actress hardly completed her initial dramatic training than she became known from the Italian Riviera to the leaving an indelible impression in the theatre world of India, Gibralt-

Egypt, and the entire European continent, Miss Angel has arrived in America. Under the Fox Film Corporation banner, the actress has embarked on a screen career predicted to be equally promising.Nine months of small roles at the Old Vic theatre in London served as ground-work for the diminutive actress, and prepared her for the feature by characterization in the London stage version of the "Sign of the Cross."
Her next stage venture was in "The Merchant of Venice," in which she toured the provinces for eighteen months.While playing a featured role in the play, "Oktoberting" at the Gate Theatre, London, producer of the associated Sound Film Industries of Wembley, England, recognized her to be perfect for the

ECHOES OF 1859

68—Prize Offered For Best Water Supply Plan.

(OCTOBER 14, 1859)

We hail with delight the notification in last Saturday's Gazette offering a prize of one thousand dollars for the most feasible plan of construction works for supplying the city with water. We look upon this as an indication of those enlightened ideas, the possession of which it was understood was the cause of H.E. Sir Hercules Robinson being selected as Governor of this Colony. We have said so much about it, that we feel as it were bound to send in a plan of some kind or other, and compete for the prize.

How we shall find the levels we do not exactly know, nor is it specified at what grade of the town the water is required to be delivered—nor is the quantity of the water required named. We should suggest that these omissions be supplied, and that the Surveyor General be required to mark the hill here and there, both East and West, indicating the height at which it is required the aqueduct should be placed.

We hope that no more dribbling half measures may be resorted to and that an abundant volume of water may be insisted on. We think the grade of the Union Chapel is about the proper level. The higher it is the more expansive it will be, and the smaller the supply of water.

We are happy to hear of another indication of the Governor's discrimination and enlarged views. H.E. pardoned the three men, who through more thoughtlessness were accessory to the homicide of John Wade. We do not wish to breed strife whilst applauding an act of mercy and humanity, and therefore all we shall say is that they have already suffered enough and more than enough.

As for our unfortunate contemporary, we now understand H.E. motives for refusing the prize of the petition in the manner he did. We dare say that what we wrote may have done some harm, as no man of spirit likes being bullied into a thing, but we believe the real cause was that poor Mr. Tarrant was too open minded, and so far from evincing any contrition, became more violent than ever. It is of course very foolish indeed of him, and some of his friends should endeavour to stop it, as it is both undignified and absurd. H.E. may not require him to eat dirt and feign repentance, but certainly our contemporary should keep his own counsel and not attempt by abuse of Government to obtain the sympathies of those whom a cruel sentence has forced him amongst.

However, the summing up, the consequential special finding of the jury, and the minutes of the packed justices assisted by Dr. McSycophant, are circumstances that stick in our editorial gizzard, unmistakably betraying Blackwood tactics. H.E. should make some allowance for overwrought feelings, the very questionable character and the utterly contemptible career of Colonel Cairne.

Mr. Tarrant certainly did some good, which Colonel Cairne until he took his final departure never did. We hope our contemporary will assume dignified silence, and thus enable H.E. to extend with propriety a little consideration towards him.

BANISHEES AT THE SESSIONS

Three Years For One: Five
For Another

Pleading guilty at the Criminal Sessions yesterday to a breach of deportation order, Chan Sam was sentenced to three years' hard labour after Mr. J. A. Fraser, Assistant Attorney General, had given details of his life of crime.

It was revealed that prisoner was a confirmed thief and had frequently returned when deported, spending five of the last seven years in prison for this offence and for larceny.

Chan Kan pleaded guilty to a similar offence, but said in extenuation that he had come to take the remains of his parents to the country.

Prisoner was stated to have been convicted for armed robbery and to have been deported many times. A sentence of five years' hard labour was imposed.

Plans Frustrated By Detectives

Charged jointly with the possession of two knives and two screw-drivers for an unlawful purpose, four Chinese were bound over by Mr. Balfour yesterday in a bond of $100 each to come up for judgment within twelve months.

Detective-Sergeant G. Goodwin said on Saturday, at 10 p.m., detectives gathered at Tai Ping Shan Street near Upper Station Street. At 10.15 p.m. the four defendants came along. They were stopped and searched. On the first defendant a screw-driver was found wrapped in paper in his girdle, the second defendant had a large knife in the back of his girdle, the third defendant had a screw-driver, while the fourth defendant had a small knife up his sleeve.

Sergeant Goodwin added that the defendants had been here two years, during which period they had done and intended to do no work. Three of them had no fixed abode.

UNLAWFUL MOORING

Twelve Chinese boatmen appeared before Commander Hole at the Marine Court yesterday, charged with unlawfully lying their boats in-shores near the Shum-shui Ferry Wharf, within a 100 yards during prohibited hours.

All the defendants pleaded guilty, and five of them were previously convicted.

His Worship then imposed a fine of $5 on the first seven defendants and another fine of $10 and $20 on those who had been previously convicted.

TAXICAB COMPANY'S AFFAIRS

Charge Against Director And Managers

On charges of issuing a false balance sheet, Yeung King-in, Chairman of the Board of Directors and Treasurer of the Yellow Taxicab Company, Limited, of 125 Connaught Road Central, and Cheung Yu, Managing Director of the same company, appeared before Mr. E. W. Hamilton yesterday.

The charge against the first defendant was that he had intended to deceive the shareholders of the Company by making, circulating or publishing, or concurring in making, circulating or publishing a false balance sheet for the year 1932.

The second defendant was charged with embezzling a sum of $80 received from Cheung Wing on behalf of the Company.

Mr. F. X. D'Almada (smr) appeared for the complainant, and Mr. Ebrace Lo for the first defendant.

On the application of Mr. D'Almada, a week's formal remand was granted and defendants were allowed bail in $1,000 each.

UNLAWFUL DREDGING

Before Commander Hole at the Marine Court yesterday, two Chinese boatmen, named Chan Wah and Leung Cheung were charged with unlawfully dredging in the Naval Anchorage on last Sunday without permission.

The defendants pleaded guilty and were each fined $7.

NEGLECTED TO PAY MAINTENANCE

Lo Shuh-wan, of independent means, appeared before Mr. E. W. Hamilton at Central Magistracy yesterday on a summons taken out by Tong Wai-yen, his 1st wife, who accuses him of having neglected to pay maintenance of $150 on an order made by Mr. Schofield.

Mr. W. A. MacKinlay appeared for the defendant, and Mr. H. L. Denny for the plaintiff.

Mr. MacKinlay asked for an adjournment for two weeks, saying he understood negotiations were being carried out by the parties concerned for a settlement. He also asked for bail for the defendant.

Mr. Hamilton said the difficulty in the case was that the defendant had all throughout the case not put in an appearance.

Mr. MacKinlay replied that he understood there had been a misunderstanding between the defendant and the representative of the other side about the settlement, and defendant thought it was not necessary for him to appear in Court.

Mr. Denny said he had no objection.

MURDER OF BOATMAN

Chinese On Capital
Charge

The Criminal Sessions for December opened at the Supreme Court yesterday when Chu Lam, an alleged accomplice, was charged with the murder of Fung Man (65), a boatwoman, at the Yau-mai Typhoon Shelter on the morning of September 11.

Mr. Thomas Tam, instructed by Messrs Denny and Co. represented Chu, the case for the Crown being in the hands of Mr. J. A. Fraser, Assistant Attorney General.

The jury was comprised of Messrs W. M. Patten (foreman), D. C. S. Alves, J. E. V. Ribeiro, A. Samy, H. Cox, V. F. D. Azevedo, and M. A. Simoes.

Outlining the case for the prosecution, Mr. Fraser said the body of the woman was found floating in her own passenger sampan in the typhoon shelter on the morning of September 11. The woman was dead from the effects of a ligature fastened tightly round her throat and mouth while the boat had been ransacked. A week later, the police arrested a gang of men, and three of them, including prisoner, were charged. Subsequently the charges against the other two were dropped. The case against prisoner included the evidence of an accomplice who would say that prisoner, and others met and planned the robbery and that he, the accomplice, watched from the bank after the others had engaged the same and pushed off.

Dr. J. B. Mackie gave evidence that the cause of death was strangulation. There was no cross-examination.

Leung Hee Wo, master of the cargo boat V803, son of deceased, said his cousin told him that his mother was missing and he rowed out into the typhoon shelter and found her dead in the boat. The cousin, Leung See, a boatwoman, corroborated.

Another boatwoman, Ng Mui, said she saw the boat drifting about and after the police had taken the body away she found an ear-ring on the deck, which she later handed over to the investigators.

The afternoon session was taken up by Cheung Shiu Shing who told the Court that he met the accused and others in an opium den and at a meeting held later that night, they planned to rob deceased. Witness said he did not want to take part in the "killing" so he was deputised to keep watch.

Witness then told of how they all met together before going out on "the job" and after further evidence was taken the case was adjourned until 10 a.m. to-day.

jection to an adjournment, provided substantial bail was fixed. He understood certain offers had been made with a view to settlement.

Mr. Hamilton said the defendant actually had to pay the sum of $1,150, on an order dating back from May last with costs. He would, therefore, fix bail in the sum of $1,000, and adjourn the case until January 2. He sincerely hoped the case would then be settled, as he understood there was a strong feeling on the part of the other side that the defendant could pay.

THOMAS LEE BOUND OVER

Counsel Enters Plea Of Guilty To Abduction Charge

CASE AGAINST MR. HO KWONG AND HIS SON WITHDRAWN

Mr. Hamilton's court was filled to capacity and there was no standing room even when Mr. Thomas Lee, Mr. Ho Kwong and his son Mr. Ernest Ho came up yesterday in connection with the charge of abduction to Shanghai of Miss Alma To, daughter of Dr. Herbert To.

Mr. H. G. Sheldon instructed by Mr. R. A. Wadson appeared for the prosecution. Mr. F. C. Jenkin instructed by Mr. W. C. Hung appeared for Lee and Mr. M. K. Lo appeared for Ho Kwong and his son.

Mr. Jenkin entering a plea of "Guilty" on behalf of his client, the prosecution sought and obtained leave to withdraw against the second and third defendants. The first defendant was bound over in a bond of $500 to come up for judgment within twelve months.

Both Mr. H. G. Sheldon and Mr. M. K. Lo addressed the court relative to the position of their clients in the case.

SEQUEL TO TRIP TO SHANGHAI

After ordering the crowded court to be less noisy, Mr. Hamilton addressing Mr. Jenkin asked:—How do you plead, Mr. Jenkin?

Mr. Jenkin: The first defendant enters a plea of "Guilty".

Mr. Hamilton: I don't know if you are bound by your plea, Mr. Lo? Your clients have pleaded "Not Guilty".

Mr. Lo: That is so.

Mr. Sheldon: In view of the plea made by the first defendant, I will apply to your Worship now for the withdrawal of the charges against the second and third defendant. In making such application I give my reasons—

Mr. Hamilton: Yes.

Mr. Sheldon: The first charge is that of taking a girl under 21 out of the possession of her father. That was the charge laid against the first defendant, and against the second and third the charge was for aid and abetting.

Met By Relatives

The charges arose out of a trip to Shanghai on the President MacKintley on October 24, made by one Alma To, and the first defendant. On the arrival of the ship at Shanghai, the ship was met by relatives of Alma To who took charge of her and sent her back to Hongkong. The affair, unfortunately, as these affairs do, attracted a good deal of publicity and therefore to Dr. To it appeared, and I submit it rightly appeared, that the matter had to be fully investigated. The affair was therefore investigated and the facts emerging from the investigation were that these two young people went off together in the same ship but that during the time on the ship they occupied separate cabins. There was no suggestion of improper conduct or impropriety between them and as I said, when they arrived in Shanghai, the girl was met by her relatives there and was safely sent back to her relative here. These facts, my learned friend, Mr. Jenkin tells me, he fully corroborates on behalf of his client, the first defendant.

Foolish Young Woman

That being so, and as no more serious accusation can be made against this young woman than that she was on this occasion a foolish young woman, and since it appears that the whole object of instigating these proceedings has now been accomplished—and the only object Dr. To had in mind was the clearing of his daughter's character—therefore he feels satisfied that, with your permission, he does not now intend to take any further proceedings against the second and third defendant, and I ask leave to withdraw the charge against them.

Mr. Hamilton: Before we turn to the case of the first defendant, I don't know whether Mr. Lo, representing the second and third defendant, wishes to address me.

Mr. M. K. Lo: With your Worship's permission, I desire to make a statement bearing really on two points. The first point, Your Worship, is that I understand from my friend Mr. Sheldon that according to his instructions, rumours had reached Dr. To to the effect that striking out of the present termination of the proceedings against the second and third defendants they may take some kind of proceedings or other against Dr. To.

I wish to state in open court that if ever there was such rumours, that they were absolutely groundless; and further that I undertake that no proceedings of any kind will be taken, and none is connected with or arising out of, the present termination of the proceedings of this case.

The second point on which I desire to address your Worship is as regards the personal position of Mr. Ho Kwong. The very nature of a case of this kind, the circumstances as they must have appeared to Dr. To, must have been such as to make it seem to him reasonable and necessary to take the proceedings he has taken against the second and third defendant. I go further and say that the circumstances were such that Dr. To was perfectly justified in taking these proceedings. The circumstances as they appeared to Dr. To, of course, mean one thing and the evidence if this case had gone on is really another matter and therefore, without retracting what I have said as to Dr. To having acted reasonably and in a bona fide manner, I do wish to assure the Court that if this case had gone on and the evidence had been taken, I would have been able to satisfy your Worship that so far from Mr. Ho Kwong having taken any part in taking away this girl from the possession of her father or having acted as an aider or abettor, that Mr. Ho Kwong, whenever he was consulted, consistently advised against doing anything foolish and advised the first defendant to wait for the next three years, so that he and the girl could get married after they had attained their majority.

Question of Publicity

The withdrawal of the proceedings would not naturally imply any guilt in the second and third defendants, but in view of the publicity given, and I daresay your Worship could not appear judicially ignorant of a very prominent poster display of Mr. Ho Kwong's name by one paper. I think it is due to him that a statement should be made in public.

Mr. Hamilton: I have heard counsel on both sides, and it seems to me that the second and third defendants have acted with propriety and the charges against them are withdrawn. They are discharged.

Mr. Jenkin did not address the Court on behalf of his client.

Not Pressing

Mr. Sheldon: I have specific instructions from Dr. To, if I may trespass on your preserves, that he is not pressing the case and is not asking for any punishment of fine or imprisonment. Dr. To has no vindictive feeling against this young man and he is not pressing for any penalty. We are entirely in your Worship's hands.

Mr. Hamilton: (to first defendant) You have pleaded guilty to what might be a very serious offence amounting in law to misdemeanour. The circumstances of the case, however, which have been stated in open court makes it quite clear that no stain remains on the lady's reputation which might have been damaged by your thoughtless and illegal action. It has been brought to my notice that you are only 21 years of age, and that makes you less than 21, I am prepared under the circumstances and in view of the strained and reasonable attitude of Dr. To to regard your youth in mitigation of your offence, which I prefer to think is one of romantic foolishness rather than of wicked intent.

I bind you over in a bond of $500 to come up for judgment whenever called upon within the next twelve months, and I hope this will be a lesson to you.

His Worship before the Court rose and said: It is a matter of pleasure to me that the case has been settled in this way and Dr. To and his family emerge perfectly clear in this matter.

A BIT OF OLD ENGLAND

Prize Giving At The Quarry Bay School

When one is fortunate enough to witness an exhibition like that given by the children of the Quarry Bay School one either wishes that he were a child again or that he were blessed with children.

The programme opened with a carol "Here we come a Wassailing." Next a band conducted by the head mistress gave the audience a real treat with some carols. It still seems a wonder how these kids, some of them weeny little tots, managed to keep such perfect time. Nursery rhymes proved popular and in the next number "King Henry and the Beggarman" the devilish laugh of the Lord High Chancellor caused great amusement. The band favoured us again after that, but this time some of the children took turns at conducting.

Scenes from Peter Pan were charmingly rendered, in fact one forgot all about the surroundings and remembered again those days when he poured over that book beloved by all children to the exclusion of everything else. The first scene presented Peter Pan going back to his boys and bringing little Wendy to mother them. In the next one the fierce-looking pirates capture Wendy and the boys but are gallantly defeated in their evil intentions by the hero.

Mr. N. L. Smith, Director of Education kindly gave away the prizes after which he said "I don't want to waste your time but I hardly know where we are myself; we are at Quarry Bay on ten thousand miles away. However, you will all agree that we have had a marvellous school. But I don't need to tell that to people, as everybody knows that already."

This seems to me like a delicate surgical operation of grafting a bit of old England here. Miss Cotton and the staff deserve all the credit for having been able to bring bits of Old England here. But it is time we were all in bed so I will not say any more except to congratulate Miss Cotton on a fine show and the colony on having such a specialist to produce such a show.

The following received prizes:

Class 7, 1st Fleming Kinnaird Homework
Class 8, 1st Elma Meffan
2nd Geoffrey Warren
Progress Peter Smith
Class 9 1st James Sanders
2nd Joan Dredge
Class 10 A form Prize.
Gordon Beer

After the distribution of prizes a song was sung called "Golden Slumbers" and then the audience joined in singing two carols, "While Shepherds Watched" and "O Come All ye Faithful."

All kinds of interesting work such as painting, needlework, etc., was on show after the prize giving and the spectators took an opportunity of seeing this. Among those present were A. R. Sutherland, Mr. A. W. Brown, Hon. Dr. To and various headmasters of other schools.

YOUNG GIRLS IN SUICIDE PACT

Rescued by Constable From Harbour

Two Chinese factory girls, both fifteen years of age, according to Chinese reckoning, entered into what is believed to be a suicide pact on Sunday night and attempted to end their lives by jumping into the Harbour off Connaught Road West.

Their struggles in the water were observed by a Chinese constable who with commendable promptitude jumped in and kept them afloat until a sampan came alongside and took them out of the water.

Police officers arriving on the scene immediately applied first aid, but in spite of all that could be done for them, one of the girls died on her way to hospital, while the other is progressing as well as can be expected.

EMPIRE SECURITY

Considerable comment has been raised by the despatch of another squadron of planes to Singapore by Great Britain in order to increase her defences at the Naval Base, which is the prelude to an immediate strengthening of her defences all along the line. Much of the comment has been unfavourable, sections of the Continental press in their supercilious way going so far as to level accusations of hypocrisy against Great Britain owing to her vaunted championing of the cause of the League of Nations. They might almost be bringing to the priming of their denunciations the Christian teaching of "the other cheek" if the metaphor may be stretched a point. This instinctive appreciation of the doctrine of Christianity is certainly commendable and we would be the first to pay homage only we find it difficult to soar to such heights as they seem able to reach in their stride. Japan, too, shows a pained surprise and the United States with their convenient logic feel they should be congratulating themselves on the foresight of their Naval programme, which entails the expenditure of $28,000,000, and will ensure their having the first Navy, including Naval Air arm, in the world within a few years—provided, of course, other nations do not compete.

Let us consider a moment. This question of Air power is one which affects Great Britain in no small measure and her decision to increase her air armaments in order to raise herself from her present low ranking to a parity with other great Powers has only been reached after the deepest deliberation and with an unchanged attitude towards disarmament. This is borne out by the recent statement of the Marquess of Londonderry of the British Government's determination to continue to pursue a policy aimed at achieving effective disarmament in the Air—"but," he added emphatically, "they could not permit the continuance of Britain's present inferiority." The statement was made in the debate by the Duke of Sutherland who asked for information regarding Britain's aerial strength in comparison with European Powers.

When the War closed Britain was the first Air Power in the world. After the Armistice, as an earnest of her pacific intentions and as a proof of the genuine character of her propaganda for the limitation of air armaments, she dispersed the greater part of her vast air fleets, until the country to-day ranks fifth only among World Powers in terms of front line strength. According to available information the French Air Force consists of 1,650 planes, the Soviet in the vicinity of 1,500, the United States and Italy between 1,000 and 1,100 while Great Britain has 850 planes.

It is clear from these figures that Great Britain's example has elicited no response in any quarter of the world whatever, and while a race between nations in armaments is a course that must be avoided at all costs, this path can no longer be followed.

This does not necessarily mean that the British Government has altered her policy in regard to general disarmament. It may be that the Disarmament Conference approached its task with an idealism which, in the present state of affairs, was unattainable. But that is no proof that it will not eventually succeed. As the Air Minister said, we must firmly believe that it will one day be possible to fix a first line strength for the principal air Powers which would neither be a threat to peace nor impose an intolerable financial burden.

TO WITHDRAW FROM CHARHAR

Statement By Col. Shibayama

Peiping, December 18.
Interviewed by Chinese pressmen, Colonel Shibayama, Japanese military attaché here, emphasised that the present operations of the Kwantung Army and Manchukuo troops under General Chang Hal Feng were directed solely against the bandits on the Jehol border and there was no ulterior motive behind them.

Colonel Shibayama announced the receipt of a telegram reporting suppression of the bandits in question, and said that consequently the Japanese and Manchukuo troops would be withdrawn in a few days.

Denying the rumours that Japan has entered Charhar as the first move in a war with Russia, Colonel Shibayama said that Sino-Japanese relations had greatly improved in the past few months.

He hoped the present incident would not serve as a setback to the better understanding between the two nations.—Reuter.

INCIDENT CLOSED.
Peiping, December 18.
Apparently Japanese operations in South-West Charhar are also intended to define the border of Manchukuo. Japanese authorities explain that the action of the Kwantung Army is due to the presence of 300 soldiers, whom are considered irregulars, in a village which they claimed is within Manchukuo. Their task completed, the main body of Japanese and Manchukuo troops have already withdrawn, leaving a small detachment to protect the border.

Japanese circles in Peiping consider the incident closed.—Reuter.

It is feared that the cargo steamer, Broomfleet, with a crew of 13 men was lost in a great gale off the East coast of England on Wednesday. No news of the vessel has been heard of since she left Goolie on that day, but 4 bodies found on the Norfolk coast indicate that she foundered in the storm in which the steamer Cui-more also went down with a crew of 12 men.—British Wireless.

ENGLAND WIN TEST MATCH

Fine Innings By Amarnath

Bombay, December 18.
Colleges and offices were deserted as 45,000 spectators gathered to see Naidu and Amarnath resume their innings.

The first twenty minutes saw brilliant batting with uncanny placings beating the well-placed field. Two hundred was hoisted after 195 minutes play. Naidu soon met with disaster and was caught off Nichols by Valentine. His stay of 180 minutes at the wickets, brought him 67 runs which included 10 fours, in a masterly way, despite an injured left hand. (207 for 3.)

Amarnath after adding sixteen runs to his overnight score, fell a victim to Clark. He was caught by Nichols at fine leg who brought off a wonderful catch about an inch above the ground. During his stay at the wickets he executed some delightful cuts and drives. His score included 21 fours. (203 for 4.)

Jal was the next man out. He was caught by Jardine off Nichols before opening his account. (208 for 5.) Amarnath soon followed, after scoring 1 he was bowled by Verity. (214 for 6.) The score at lunch time was 225 for 6, Colah and Merchant each had 3 and 11 respectively.

On resuming after lunch Merchant was the first to return to the pavilion. He scored 30 runs in 82 minutes which included 6 fours. (248 for 7.)

Nissar after scoring a single was lb.w. to Nichols. (249 for 8.) Colah after scoring twelve was caught by Elliott off Nichols. (258 for 9.) Ranji before opening his score got his leg in front of one from Nichols. (258 for 10.) Jamshed with one to his credit was not out.

England was 39 in arrears when Mitchell and Walters opened their 2nd innings. Mitchell after scoring 9 was lb.w. off Amarnath. (15 for 1.) Walters made the winning hit for England with a two to square leg. Barnett hit Nissar for sixes twice in succession. Their scores were 14 and 17, respectively.

To Be Brought Before Military Tribunal

Dublin, December 18.
It is understood that General O'Duffy, leader of the Irish "Blue Shirts," who was arrested at Westport, County Mayo, yesterday, for wearing the uniform of the organization, will be brought before a military tribunal at an early date.

The organization was recently declared illegal by President Eamon de Valera.

The military tribunal is empowered to impose sentences from terms of imprisonment to death.

"WILL NOT YIELD."

Dublin, December 18.
Addressing a gathering of 10,000 at an open-air meeting at Tralee, the President of the Irish Free State, Mr. Eamon de Valera yesterday devoted his speech mainly to a plea for unity, discipline and peace and order.

He said that the Free State was at present being pressed by one of the biggest nations in the world, through economic means, to make them yield to unjust demands. They were not going to yield, but peace was essential to maintain themselves against pressure.—Reuter.

NOTES FROM LIUCHOW

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Kwangsi Dec. 5.

On Sunday last, a fire started along the foreshore, and swept in a short time over a large section of the south end of the city. Over one hundred houses, mostly business places, now lie in ruins. It started in a small place where a number of workmen were preparing cotton to make mattresses. They were smoking at the time, and through their carelessness, the cotton was ignited. The houses being built completely of wood, and very dry, it was not long before the fire spread to neighbouring houses, and many of the people had to flee without being able to save anything. The fire raged furiously for over three hours before it was brought under control. Not only was a large section of the foreshore burned, but spread across the wide street to the warehouses. Included in the large brick business places now in ruins is the large Liu King Hotel, which was completely gutted. As far as can be accounted there were only two casualties. An old man in the excitement, instead of leaving the building, went to the top floor, and his daughter-in-law ran after him to save him. Before they could get out of the building, the whole first floor was a furnace and shortly the walls collapsed, they being burned to death. The fire department did good work with their three man-power machines and one motor engine. Through their efforts undoubtedly a large portion of the city was saved. The last fire of any proportion in Liuchow, was five years ago, when over half of the city was burned.

Recently Dr. E. S. Fish and Mr. R. J. Butler, C.I.M. missionaries of Kwachow passed through here on their way to Wuchow. They expect to take back with them a Ford Ambulance for their work in Ngan Shuen and Kwei Yang. Roads are now built, so that one can travel by motor from a point 7 miles north of Wuchow, through the entire province of Kwangsi, and north to Kwachow Province. They expect to drive the distance from Wuchow to Kwei Yang in four or five days. For them to go from Kwei Yang to Shanghai, has in the past meant 14 days overland walking, and at least 16 days by river boat down the Yangtze. Taking the southern route, via Wuchow, the same distance can be travelled in less than half the time, with no overland travel.

RECOVERY IN CHINA

Effective Financial Supervision

(TO THE EDITOR OF "THE TIMES.")

London, Nov. 29. Sir—In his letter published in "The Times" of November 6, Sir John Wardlaw Milne recommended the adoption of a less aloof and more helpful policy towards China and, as a first step, the removal of the British Legation from Peking to Nanking. From this letter, and from the arguments used in the House of Lords' discussion of this subject two days later, it would appear that those who advocate a policy of more active support for the present Government at Nanking do so on grounds of political and commercial expediency. Their arguments involve two important assumptions: first, that the Nanking Government has already made remarkable progress towards the restoration of prosperity; secondly, that China offers larger trading possibilities than exist in any other market in the world. May I be permitted to observe that, as matters now stand, neither assumption is justified?

When, at the end of July, the question of "Reorganizing China" was discussed in "The Times," and the "new collaboration" between Nanking and Geneva generally regarded as a "hopeful experiment," I ventured to observe, in a letter published in "The Times" of July 30, that everything in the actual condition and recent history of China demonstrates the simple truth that "no reorganization scheme, can possibly produce any real or lasting improvement, unless it includes provision for effective supervision of the departmental finances concerned."

With regard to the present proposals for a policy of helpfulness and closer co-operation with the present rulers of China, may I be allowed once more to draw attention to this all-important aspect of the matter and to point out that under existing conditions no amount of support rendered to Chiang Kai-shek's Government, no organization of a gendarmerie or removal of our Legation to Nanking, can possibly restore prosperity to China or increase the people's buying power and our trading opportunities? Before any real improvement can be hoped for the present desperate condition of the peasantry must be relieved, and this can only be done by means of some effective system of financial supervision, which shall set a limit to the provincial and local officials—at present wholly uncontrolled, despite the "power and prestige" attributed to Nanking.

Space does not permit of any detailed exposition either of the intolerable burden of taxation now imposed upon the peasantry or of the economic conditions which in many fertile districts are driving the hopeless farmers from their homesteads, leaving the land untillied. I may, however, cite, as a fairly representative case, that of the agricultural "Hsien" of Nanchong in Szechuan, a once thriving district with a population of 240,000. According to figures derived from Chinese official sources the amount actually received in local and provincial taxes, under 17 headings, by the authorities of this district, during the past year, was $804,345. As most of the "special" taxes are "farmed out" for collection, however, the total amount extracted from the peasantry was very much larger, and to it must be added the amounts levied by the Central Government on salt, wine, tobacco, etc. Under these conditions it is not surprising, though very significant, that, whereas the average price of home-grown rice in China last year was $13 a picul, the staple could be imported from Siam or Saigon at $10 a picul, and that China, an agricultural country in the world, imported in 1932 no less than 1,340,000 tons of rice and 893,000 tons of oats. It is equally significant that the Nanking Government's proposed remedy for this parlous situation (directly attributable to predatory taxation) is to levy an import tax on foreign rice and other agricultural produce!

Such being the plight of China's peasantry one may pertinently inquire, at this point, and by what means, could the transfer of the British Legation from Peking to a residence "nearer to the centre of things" produce results calculated to restore prosperity to the

FOREIGN TRADE IN CHINA

Extraterritoriality

JAPAN TO LEAD IN ABOLITION?

Special Air-Mail Service

London, November 29. In the second of a series of three lectures on "Foreign trade in China," which is being given in the boardroom of the Manchester Chamber of Commerce, Mr. E. W. Mead, Reader in Chinese at the Manchester University, last evening completed his review of the historical facts which led to the establishment of the treaty port system in China, under which foreign traders live and do business in that country, and described in detail the beginning of the "modernist" movement and their likely effect on foreign trade there. Incidentally, he mentioned that the most authoritative figure of foreign investments in China is now given as $700,000,000 of which the British share is between $200,000,000 and $250,000,000.

The old traditional method followed by British traders in China was to leave their business with the interior in the hands of a Chinese agent, because, although foreigners might travel in the country, they could not lease premises there and set up signs outside such premises. But in recent years a number of firms, particularly those interested in oil, cigarettes, and chemicals, had been exploring the interior with the aid of the Chinese agent, and in some cases with extraordinarily effective results when the firms had not stood strictly on their treaty rights.

While in China a part of his business had been to deal with cases of what was described as illegal taxation in the interior. The British Government had always held that the goods of the British merchant remained under the protection of the British Government even after they passed into the interior and had left the merchant's control into that of his agent's; and the controversy, which had resulted from this had been unending. Hence the inclination on the part of some merchants not to worry about their treaty rights.

EXTRATERRITORIALITY

In outlining the events of the last ten years Mr. Mead emphasized the importance of the demand of the Chinese Nationalist Government for equality in international relations and the abolition of extraterritoriality. There was still fighting in China, but since 1925 China had been absolutely united on her foreign policy. To-day it was particularly interesting to read the Chinese press, because it seemed to be pointing to the likelihood of an agreement being made between Japan and China, and to Japan's abandoning all her extraterritoriality. If that happened there was a possibility of other Powers tumbling over one another in an effort to arrive at agreements, just as happened in the case of the tariff. That would mean, that traders, if they were wise, would have to adjust themselves to the new regime and make sure they were not caught napping.

Sir Kenneth D. Stewart presided in the unavoidable absence of Sir Christopher Needham.

Is it not evident that unless some effective system of fiscal and financial supervision can be introduced by the friendly Powers, similar to that organized after the Taping upheaval by Sir Robert Hart, no amount of political support can arrest the process of economic demoralization, which began with the Revolution of 1911? And, unless this process can be arrested, what is to prevent a repetition of the recent history of Manchuria on a wider scale?

I am, Sir, etc.

J. O. P. BLAND.

THE 1934 NAVAL PROGRAMMES

Treaty Ignored By Other Powers

(Special Air-Mail Service)

London, Nov. 29. A large building programme, to make good the Navy's acute shortage of cruisers and anti-submarine craft, is confidently anticipated in Service circles. Official reticence is ascribed to the Government's desire not to prejudice the slender hope that still remains of a new disarmament convention. If that hope proves vain a new replenishment programme will be unavoidable.

Corresponding action by the Dominions is also anticipated. To realise the new policy recently announced at Canberra the Australian Government will have to build two new cruisers, either of the Leander (7,000-ton) type, or the latest Admiralty 9,000-ton class. Canada and New Zealand are also showing a keener interest in imperial defence.

There is a widespread, but erroneous impression that a big programme next year would conflict with the London Treaty. As that agreement expires at the end of 1936, ships laid down for completion after that date do not come within its scope. The numerous British cruisers which are or will be overage by then gives us an ample margin for new construction.

OTHER POWER'S SUBMARINES
The Socialist Government which negotiated the London Treaty agreed to limit our cruiser fleet to fifty ships, but only "for the strictly limited period covered by the Treaty, and provided that other Powers reduce correspondingly their projected programmes."

This condition has not been fulfilled. On the contrary, no fewer than thirty-two new cruisers have been laid down since the Treaty by the other four Powers concerned, and the basis on which we accepted such a drastic restriction of cruiser strength no longer exists.

The same applies to destroyers. As the Socialist Government pointed out in July, 1930, "a maximum total of 150,000 tons for destroyers was agreed to subject to reductions in the submarine strengths of other Powers."

But instead of reducing submarines, the other Powers have largely increased them. Since the London Treaty was signed they have completed and laid down 115 new submarines, France alone having built fifty-eight, and Italy thirty-four.

We shall have only 88,000 tons of under-age destroyers by the end of 1936, and will therefore be 62,000 tons below even the grossly inadequate total permitted by Treaty.

ANTI-WAR DELEGATES IN CHINA

Lord Marley's Experiences On His Recent Visit

(Special Air-Mail Service)

London, Nov. 29. Lord Marley, at a meeting in the Kingsway Hall last night organized by the British Anti-War Movement, related some strange experiences he and the other members of the Far Eastern anti-war delegation had undergone on their recent visit to China. The chair was taken by Mr. Percy Collick, and among the speakers were two members of the delegation, Dr. Martens, a member of the Belgian Parliament, and Mr. P. Vallant-Couturier, both of whom spoke in French, their speeches being afterwards translated into English.

A SHANGHAI PRISON

The delegation, said Lord Marley, had a rousing reception in Shanghai, though when they arrived there it was to find that thousands of Chinese sympathisers with the movement had been put into prison. He and the members of the delegation considered it their duty to obtain permission to visit one of the prisons not far from Shanghai. "It had been built to house 700 prisoners," he said, "but there were 2,700 in it." In some of the cells built for three prisoners they found ten men huddled together. Many of them

BRIBERY AND CORRUPTION

Evidence at Salvage Corps Trial

London, December 18. Bribery and corruption in my business started before I was born, declared Leopold Harris when giving evidence at the trial of Miles of the Salvage Corps. Harris merely carried on the practices already existing. It was simply a question of our having to compete with the methods of our competitors. Harris said he never tempted people, but awaited till they hinted they were susceptible to money payments in return for their services. The Salvage Corps as long as Harris had known it had been corrupt. He said Miles was aware of the corrupt practices in May 1930. It was Miles who had advised him to get rid of an employee who reported office corruption to Miles. Up to then Miles had received no payments from Harris.

Referring to the unnamed superintendent in the Salvage Corps, Harris said he was receiving bribes ever since he became an officer in the corps. Counsel passed Harris a list of officers in the Salvage Corps and asked him to mark those he had bribed. Harris found it quicker to mark those who had not been bribed and crossed out one name. He passed it back. The name crossed out was the son of one who had been bribed by Harris. He related how he put £50 of his own money on a 60% for Miles' account. The dog won and he paid Miles. What is the name of the dog? asked Counsel. Golden Lion, replied Harris.—Reuter.

CO-OPERATION FROM CANTON

Wanted by Nanking Leaders

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Canton, Dec. 18. According to information emanating from local official circles, the report that Messrs Sun Fo and Hsuan Shao Hsung will shortly come to Canton to confer with the leaders of the Southwest, has not been confirmed.

It is rumoured that the Nanking Government is anxious to secure the co-operation and support of the Southwest, and has appointed Messrs Sun Fo and Hsuan Shao Hsung as its plenipotentiaries. It is stated that their mission to the South is to convene with the members of the Southwest Political Council and to request the Kwangtung military leaders to mobilise all available forces in Kwangtung to launch an attack on Fukien. It is learned that if this proposal cannot be accepted, they hope, at least, Kwangtung will not offer any moral or material support to Fukien.

According to a high official of the Southwest Political Council, the turning point of the present political situation now rests on Kwangtung, although the authorities of the Nanking government do not expect Kwangtung to mobilise troops against Fukien.

On the other hand if Kwangtung supports Nanking, Kwangtung will have to follow suit. He also intimates that the Nanking Peace Delegation headed by Mr. Chang Chi left here for Nanking hoping to induce the Kwangtung military authorities to remain neutral in case of a Fukien-Nanking conflict. This spokesman pointed out that Nanking promises to appropriate a handsome amount of the Cotton Loan from the United States to Kwangtung, to speed up reconstruction, and will also set aside a sum of $500,000 each month for military expenditure in Kwangtung.

NANKING GOVERNMENT CONFIDENT

Nanking, December 18. Official utterances profess confidence that the Fukien forces will be crushingly defeated in the event of their attack on Chekiang. Major hostilities are expected soon as the Nationalist government is reported to have ordered an offensive on the north Fukien front.

Questioned by pressmen regarding the likelihood of Nanking issuing a punitive mandate, a Government official said such a formality was not always necessary and hostilities would break out as soon as the rebels came in contact with government troops.—Reuter.

According to the Shanghai Evening Post, 15,000 Communists troops have been absorbed into the Fukien Army.—Reuter.

HOUSE OF LORDS REFORM

Reduction of 700 To 300

London, December 18. The House of Lords to-morrow launches its most contentious issue for year, when the Marquis Salisbury, former leader of the House of Lords, introduces his Bill for reform of the House of Lords.

The first reading is expected to be taken on broad principle, without details in order to sound opinion, but Lord Salisbury, it is understood, will tentatively propose that membership be reduced from 700 to 300, in addition to the Royal Princes, the law lords, and some ecclesiastics.

The House would be empowered to delay legislation pending the approval of the country, while the House of Lords would be represented on a joint committee of both Houses for the certification of money Bills.

The Government is expected to follow closely the trend opinion, as Ministerial circles are of the opinion that the Government should deal with the reform of the House of Lords in the lifetime of the present Parliament.—Reuter.

HONG KONG FOOTBALL COUNCIL MEETING

Chairman's Appeal To Barrackers

SHANGHAI QUESTIONS INTERPORT RULES

A public appeal to barrackers to stop their "insulting behaviour" was made by the Chairman, Major C. M. Manners at the monthly meeting of the Hongkong Football Council yesterday. Measures to abate this nuisance were also discussed and adopted.

The query raised by the Shanghai Football Association in regard to the destiny of the Cup should there be a triple tie when three teams competed, was also dealt with when it was suggested that the trophy should remain with the last winner, should that be the case.

HANDBILLS TO BE DISTRIBUTED

"Insulting" Barracking

Arising from a letter received from a club complaining of the behaviour of spectators in a recent match, the Chairman, Major C. M. Manners said that insulting and unfair barracking had been very noticeable this year, particularly in keen matches. The insulting remarks that had been made to referees who did their best to control the games had been very unfair, and this nuisance would one day lead to a very serious situation. On Sunday afternoon when the match between the "Lincolns" and South China was in progress, the supporters of both sides indulged in their "insulting" barracking and threw mud at the referee which incited the players to such an extent that two of them were ordered off the field.

"We beg to notify the public," said Mr. Manners, "that their behaviour is detrimental."

Mr. Bush made a very sound suggestion that handbills printed in Chinese should be distributed to everybody. "But in view of the recent incidents we ought to go one step further."

Mr. James: "It was done several years ago."

Mr. Manners: "It should not only be in Chinese but also in English. The behaviour of the public by insulting barracking and unfair remarks on the referee was largely responsible for these incidents."

Capt. Elliot-Heywood, who was present at the Lincoln-South China match said that before the end of the game about 50 per cent of the Chinese jumped out from their seats. Fortunately there were troops present and they controlled the situation without much difficulty. In the South China-Navy match about two weeks ago, insulting remarks were made by the Chinese, soldiers and sailors.

Mr. James: In the case of the Chinese, the referee could hardly be expected to deal with the situation as he could not understand the language, but in the case of any European making insulting remarks, he should at once go to a policeman and have the person removed.

Captain Elliot-Heywood: It is very difficult to find out the person. In the South China-Navy match I heard an offensive remark made by a European but on turning round I could not find who he was. Both the Army and the Navy have taken up measures to abate this nuisance.

It was then decided that in regard to the Chinese, handbills would be distributed while in the case of Europeans, the various civilian clubs would be warned to suppress their supporters from indulging in "insulting barracking."

Shanghai Interport Query

Regarding the query raised by the Shanghai Football Association, the chairman said that he had received a letter asking the Council what steps they were going to take if three teams were competing and there should be a tie, each team winning a match. Mr. James suggested that if that were the case, the cup should remain with the last winner. Seconded by Capt. Elliot-Heywood it was decided to forward the suggestion to Shanghai.

Other Matters

Other matters of interest discussed were the withdrawal of Lieut. Hocquard of the Lincolns, who was nominated Captain of the Interport team, from the trials, as he was definitely unable to make the trip.

Allan, the Royal Artillery right back, was also suggested to be withdrawn from the trials as he was leaving for home before the Interport.

Mr. T. A. Mitchell had tendered his resignation to the Council owing to ill-health. The Chairman, in accepting, said that he very much regretted to do so, and hoped that Mr. Mitchell, who was going home on doctor's orders, would return with his health fully restored. The Kowloon Football Club was asked to nominate one of their members to fill the vacancy.

Mr. A. R. Hughes, the Navy representative asked permission to play the Lai Wah Cup final at an earlier date instead of March 10 as at present arranged. The Fleet would be leaving in January 10 for the South and this would greatly reduce the strength of the Navy team. It was then decided to play the match on December 30 on the Club ground.

CAMBRIDGE LEAD THE LEAGUE

Jamieson Outplays Tolley

(Special Air-Mail Service)

London, November 22. Cambridge University began a two-days' match with The League on the Royal Worlington and Newmarket Clubs course near Mildenhall yesterday. Four games being played in the morning followed by singles. The League side was strongly represented with the amateur ex-champions, C. J. H. Tolley and John de Forest, as their leading foursome pair, but Cambridge University accomplished one of the best performances of the term by gaining a three-point lead in the series, winning five of the seven games. P. B. M. Wallace and T. F. B. Law were not overawed by the might of their opponents in the top game, beating Tolley and de Forest by 3 and 2 without ever being in arrears.

Cambridge did better still in the afternoon, winning the singles by 10 points to 4, including two halved encounters. Jamieson, the captain, beat Tolley by 5 and 4, while McGill defeated the other ex-champion, de Forest, by 3 and 1. Wallace won by two holes against Hartley, and Neilson made a fourth successive win for the Light Blues when he won by 3 and 2 against Oppenheimer.

Foursomes—P. B. M. Wallace (Trinity Hall) and T. F. B. Law (Pembroke) beat C. J. H. Tolley and J. de Forest, 3 and 2; G. R. A. Jamieson (Magdalen) and H. C. Neilson (Clare) beat R. W. Hartley and Bernard Darwin, 3 and 2; W. E. Carr (Trinity) and R. H. McGill (Trinity Hall) beat E. M. Prain and Lt.-Col. J. S. Mellor, 5 and 4; P. W. Marsham (Trinity) and J. S. L. Lyon (Trinity) lost to R. H. Oppenheimer and H. C. Longhurst, 2 and 1; M. R. Gardner (Pembroke) and F. M. Goodwin (Emmanuel) beat I. A. de H. Lyle and J. S. O. Haslewood, 2 up; R. I. Beck (Jesus) and P. A. Carter (Sidney Sussex) beat D. A. Drayson and H. W. Higginson, 2 and 1; F. J. Risdale (Pembroke) and M. Illingworth (Jesus) lost to T. P. Whitaker and R. E. C. Butterworth, 1 down.

Single—G. R. A. Jamieson beat C. J. H. Tolley, 5 and 4; P. B. M. Wallace beat Rex Hartley, 2 up; R. H. McGill beat John de Forest, 3 and 1; H. C. Neilson beat R. H. Oppenheimer, 3 and 2; T. F. B. Law lost to E. M. Prain, 3 and 2; J. S. L. Lyon beat Bernard Darwin, 4 and 3; W. E. Carr beat I. A. de H. Lyle, 5 and 4; P. W. Marsham and H. C. Longhurst halved; M. R. Gardner beat Lt. Col. J. S. Mellor, 1 up; F. M. Goodwin lost to J. S. O. Haslewood, 1 down; R. I. Beck beat D. A. Drayson, 3 and 2; P. A. Carter lost to T. P. Whitaker, 7 and 8; F. J. Risdale and H. W. Higginson halved; M. Illingworth beat R. E. C. Butterworth, 5 and 4.

INCOME TAX PROSPECTS

Optimists have hazarded guesses at the likelihood of a reduction in the Income Tax consequent upon a windfall to the Exchequer.

A further sum, making a total in all of about £15,000,000, will be received by the Chancellor before the end of the financial year in March.

This would be equivalent to the amount required to reduce income-tax by 3d in the 2.

LOCAL HOCKEY Club And Berwick Draw

The Club-Berwick match yesterday ended in a draw despite the fact that the Club were two men short till about a quarter of an hour from time when Lt. Alexander-Sinclair, R. N., joined them. The Club started with eight men only, but the Berwick lent them one man to make things even. Taken on the whole, the standard of play was quite good, and the first goal came after some keen play, Kilbee putting the Club ahead with a fast shot.

The second half saw the teams struggling just as hard and neither side could break through until the Berwick centre-forward got possession of the ball and ran down cleverly to beat Moss with a well-placed drive. The final whistle sounded with the score at one goal all.

RADIO'S EASY WIN

Making the trip to Pokfulam Radio Sports Club beat the University easily in their friendly encounter, scoring six goals to the University's one.

Play was rather one-sided and the Radio men did practically what they liked. Gurbuchan Singh scored the first goal for the Radios, and then Avatar Singh the second. Then these players scored alternately until the total mounted till six.

UNIVERSITY GOLF

Oxford's Narrow Defeat

ROUND OF 67 BY A. J. PEECH

(Special Air-Mail Service)

London, Nov. 22. Oxford University were narrowly defeated—10 games to 8—in their match against Worpleston, at Brookwood yesterday. The outstanding feature of the play was a brilliant round of 67 by A. J. Peech, leader of the home team.

Peech, who won the President's Putter tournament of the Oxford and Cambridge Society early in the year, is an old Oxford player, though he never succeeded in getting his Blue. In beating the University captain, K. A. S. Morrice, by 6 and 5, Peech had five 3's running, from the third to the seventh hole inclusive, in which there were two "birdies" and an "eagle." His putting was phenomenal, two putts each of twenty yards being holed on successive greens.

Though Morrice reached the turn in 36, one stroke below the standard scratch score, he was four down. Peech was irresistible, for in the foursomes, in which he was partnered by G. C. Stokoe, the opponents Morrice and J. J. F. Penlink, never had the ghost of a chance, being beaten by the overwhelming margin of 7 and 5. In the course of the thirteen holes of the match the winners had a couple of 2's, one at the seventh and the other at the tenth.

Commander J. R. Johnston and W. Frame, playing second couple for Worpleston, owed defeat largely to the fact that they lost the first hole because R. F. Brown, one of the Oxford players, in flagging from a bunker, hit the flagstick held by Johnston's caddy. The Oxford pair, Brown and R. D. Knox, thus won a hole which they had little or no hope of saving. This incident had a big influence on the game, which Oxford won by 2 and 1.

Curiously enough, the match was virtually won for Worpleston by R. G. de Quincey, who is at Oxford, and is in the running for his Blue. Being a member of the club, he played for the home side, and won both his matches, thus turning the scales in Worpleston's favour. Results:—

Foursomes (Oxford players first). K. A. S. Morrice and J. J. F. Penlink lost to G. C. Stokoe and A. J. Peech, 7 and 5; R. F. Brown and R. D. Knox beat Cdr. J. R. Johnston and W. Frame, 2 and 1; A. A. Duncan and I. A. Hargreave beat Capt. A. C. Giles and B. J. T. Bosanquet, 4 and 3; J. H. Johnston and N. B. Mitchell-Jones lost to Capt. G. A. Maxon and R. G. de Quincey, 1 hole; A. E. W. Henderson and F. H. Tate beat J. T. Neilson and A. W. Pim, 3 and 2; J. T. Hanson-Lawson and D. F. Ashmore lost to E. D. Dickson and R. G. Mills, 3 and 1.

Singles. Morrice lost to Peech, 6 and 5; Duncan lost to Giles, 1 hole; Brown beat Johnston, 5 and 3; Knox beat Maxon, 2 and 1; Hargreave lost to Frame, 4 and 3; Johnston beat Neilson, 3 and 3; Mitchell-Jones lost to Bosanquet, 1 hole; Henderson lost to Pim, 4 and 3; Ashmore lost to de Quincey, 2 and 1; Hanson-Lawson beat Major Hind, 3 and 2; Tate beat Mills, 4 and 1.

FOOTBALL'S TOLL IN AMERICA

32 Players Killed In 10 Weeks

New York, Monday. So rough has been the present American football season that in the first ten weeks 32 players have been killed. Now, however, the death-roll has been extended to the ranks of spectators.

Jay Towner, 23, who had attended an important game at Princeton University on Saturday, was found dead during the week-end in a secluded part of the college grounds. He had sustained internal haemorrhage, bruises on the face, two broken wrists, and a severe rupture.

The police believe that in the pandemonium after the game Towner was knocked down in the crowd, trampled on, and crushed against an exit gate.

Spectators probably began to carry him to hospital, but became afraid lest they should be involved when they found he was dead, and abandoned the body.

THE CALLOUS COACH

The 1933 season will very likely be one of the worst ever recorded. Last year 38 players and the year before 50 were killed. No record is kept of the many serious injuries received.

A campaign has already been started to "clean up" American football, and more tightening up will probably follow this season's fatalities. But the outlook is not very hopeful when a college coach can make the reply given to me to-day. When I consulted him about this season's 32 deaths, he said: "That's always the way before the boys toughen up."

CORRESPONDENCE

[All letters intended for publication must be accompanied by the name and address of the writer, not for publication, unless as desired, but as evidence of good faith.—Ed.]

[TO THE EDITOR OF THE "HONG KONG DAILY PRESS."]

Sir,

Through the medium of your valued paper, I have to enter my protest against the confusion that is usually made in the Press and by the Press Agencies on this side in loosely using the word "Indian" as referring to things and people other than those of India proper. This is particularly noticeable in the very common use of the word "Indian" as referring to the "Red Indians."

Without meaning any disparagement to the brave "Red Indian" heroes of Canada and the United States, whose gradual extinction I sincerely deplore, we Indians of India do not like to be confused with other variously-termed Indians. The word "Indian" must be used simply to refer to the Indians of India alone and not to any other race. The mere fact that the Press Message emanates from one of the American or Mexican towns is not enough, because "India" and "Indians of India" being more well-known, the impression left on the mind is that the references made in the Press are in connection with Indians of India.

This confusion came to be caused by the adventures of the European Navigators. These people in their greed to find that "Dreamland," that "Gorgeous East" known as "India," called every land that they came across in their voyages of exploration, "India." Subsequently, however, when they found the real India, they variously termed those former lands as East India, West India, according to their situation from India. Thus all so they called the natives of America "Indians." Later on they distinguished them as "Red Indians" from their colour as distinct from Indians of India proper. Thus far it was all right.

Then why not follow the practice? Through the medium of your valued paper, therefore, I wish to draw the attention of the Press to this in order to avoid a confusion, which we Indians greatly resent. The word "Indian" used as it is, cannot and must not be applied to any other things but those referring to India alone. All other so-called "Indians" should be designated as "West Indians" or "East Indians" or "Red Indians." We are proud of the fact that other parts of the world have been named after "India." But nevertheless, this confusion should be avoided.

Yours etc.

LONDON WITHOUT GRENADIERS

With the departure for Egypt to-day of the 3rd Battalion Grenadier Guards London is for the first time in many a long day left without a single battalion of the regiment quartered in its midst.

The 1st Battalion is at Aldershot, and the 2nd Battalion at Windsor. I was discussing this unusual circumstance with an old Grenadier yesterday. He told me that in the whole course of his service—now over 30 years—he could recall no precedent.

That statement does not overlook the years of the Great War. True, the Grenadiers had four battalions in the field. But throughout there remained a 5th (reserve) battalion at Chelsea barracks.

I hear that there will be a large crowd of old friends at Southampton to-day to see Col. Pilcher and his men off to warmer climates.

OUR WEAKNESS
IN THE AIR

Potential Bombers
In Germany

THE AERO-CHEMICAL WEAPON

The grave military significance of figures published by the Air Ministry on the progress of civil aviation in 1932 was revealed recently in some striking comments made, in an interview with a representative of "The Observer," by an authority on air power who is deeply concerned about our weakness in the air and the reduction of our air fleet to one-fifth of its previous strength.

According to the Air Ministry's report, the world figure of miles flown by regular air services last year was over ninety millions. The following table shows how comparatively small was Britain's share—

Country	Miles Flown
United States	50,932,967
Germany	5,712,117
France	6,457,315
Italy	2,859,432
Holland	1,919,422
Great Britain	1,758,000

"These figures," our authority said, "show the comparative lack of reserves in commercial machines which are convertible, in personnel, and in the ability to expand quickly in case of need."

Having recalled that the total weight of bombs dropped on London during German air raids in the course of the war was thirty tons, he said: "Put that fact side by side with this, namely, that aeroplanes of the German air-lineer class known as the D 2000, could drop the same weight of bombs, or war chemicals (gas) in one raid."

"It is true," he remarked, "that at the present time, so far as we know, Germany possesses only two machines of this particular class; but she is building more. This particular class represents the most formidable type of potential night-bomber, and is merely selected to indicate future possibilities."

CONVERTIBLE COMMERCIAL MACHINES.

"Germany possesses several hundred commercial machines operating her air route system, the largest in Europe, which are convertible to war purposes, and they could at the present time deliver in a single raid many times as great a weight in bombs, or war chemicals, as was delivered by her aircraft on London in the course of the whole war."

"We do not know what reserves in aircraft Germany possesses. The French assert that they are very considerable, and that she has made arrangements to bring in machines from adjoining countries, notably Sweden and Holland, should they be required."

"As regards day bombers, Germany has developed several types of commercial aircraft for rapid mail-carrying purposes, of which the performance is not far short of our best day bombers."

"These facts and figures, it was pointed out, are not quoted in any spirit of empty against Germany, but merely to show that re-arming in the air, given the facilities that she possesses, is not as remote a possibility as many people seem to imagine. A very large proportion of the German commercial aircraft has been designed with a view to convertibility. She has also very large reserves of trained pilots as a result of the deliberate policy pursued for years past."

"Consider these facts," this authority continued, "in conjunction with the fact that Germany is, by reason of her large chemical industry (the largest in the world), the world's leading chemical power, and bear in mind that more and more the centre of gravity of force is shifting towards the aero-chemical weapon, a truth which we should not lose sight of when weighing the possibilities of German military recovery."

POSITION OF FRANCE

"In spite of all that has been said, France is immeasurably more powerful in the air than Germany. France and her allies can in military aircraft alone muster some 4,000 machines, and she also possesses large commercial reserves. But against this it must not be forgotten that Italy, potentially hostile to France, is the second air power in Europe."

"In view of this situation, what influence does England as fifth air power, backed by comparatively insignificant commercial development, really possess in Europe today? In view of the constant development of Continental air power what influence is she likely to possess in the crisis of European affairs which Mussolini estimates will be reached between the years 1935 and 1940?"

"Whether we consider this issue from the point of national security alone or from that of bringing our full weight and influence to bear in Europe in the interests of peace, appeasement and disarmament, it is essential for us to make good our influence, disparity in the latest and dominant form of force. For the navy, hitherto the bulwark of our security, and the principal backing for diplomacy, has in both

YAUMATI SCHOOL YEAR'S REPORT

Mr. N. L. Smith Presents
The Prizes

The Headmaster, Mr. Upsdell.

"The Director of Education, ladies, and gentlemen, boys. I have much pleasure in presenting the report of this school for the year ending October 31st, 1933."

Attendance

The school opened 296 times during the year which was shorter by two months owing to the change in the date of the educational year. The maximum enrolment was 266 which is less than last year due to the fact that nearly all the boys remained throughout the whole year and thus no vacancies were created.

Building and Equipment

During the summer holidays the whole school was painted and colourwashed both internally and externally; a 500 gallon balancing tank was installed to improve the water system and it only now remains for proper fittings to be placed in the lavatories which may then be considered as satisfactory.

Discipline

There is a very strong desire throughout the school to know what is the right thing to do and to do it and we have a right to be justly proud of the whole tone of the school.

Health

An average attendance of 91.6% is indicative of the general health of the boys, fever being the chief cause of non-attendance. The clinic has been held regularly every week and any boy who does not feel well can receive medical attention; I should like to express my thanks in this connection.

Studies

The results of the Annual Examination were very satisfactory. In Class 4 34 boys passed out of 42 and in the rest of the school 177 boys passed out of 198. Although there were only about 12 vacancies in the school for new boys at the beginning of the year and a notice to this effect was posted at the school gate there were literally hundreds of boys applying for those places which is adequate testimony to the value of the school to the community.

Athletics

The short school year necessitated high pressure in studies and it was therefore expected that games would be largely neglected; this was not the case. Great interest was evinced in sports throughout the school. The Annual Sports were held just after the close of the school year and 102 boys, or well over one-third of the boys, took part. The Inter Class football shield was won by 5A in splendid style. We again won the Small Boys Volley Ball shield in the league organized by the YM.C.A. for all schools in Kowloon and the New Territories this being the second year in succession.

General

The whole year has been a most delightful one and I should like to thank the whole of the Staff, not forgetting Mr. Chiu who puts in a lot of time and thought connected with the purchase and issue of exercise books, for their splendid co-operation in everything pertaining to the welfare and efficiency of the school.

PANAMA CANAL TRAFFIC

Slow—but nevertheless, definite improvement in shipping seems to be indicated from Panama, as well as from Suez. During August last 416 vessels traversed the Panama Canal, as compared with only 314 during August, 1932. In the six months, March-August, the Canal authorities took G.810,082,432 in tolls, as against G.89,415,773 for the same term in 1932. Comparative figures are:

Month	Vessels
March 1933	399
March 1932	370
April	372
May	384
June	401
July	418
August	416

Nationalities of vessels are not given, but there is little doubt, since the many and vigorous protests made against Suez Canal overcharges, that the proportion of non-American shipping has risen, and is still rising.

KING HONOURS MEMBERS OF ARCTIC EXPEDITION

London, November, 22.
Five members of an Arctic expedition were honoured by the King at Buckingham Palace today.

They belonged to the Watkins Greenland Expedition, which explored the Arctic ice cap of Greenland in 1930-31 with a view to establishing an all-British air route across the Arctic to Canada.

Mr. E. G. Watkins, the 23-year-old leader of the expedition, was drowned in Greenland last year, when his Eskimo canoe overturned, and Captain Percy Lemon, another member of the band, died after inadvertently swallowing corrosive fluid.

To-day at the Palace five of their comrades received the Polar Medal in silver, with a clasp inscribed "Arctic 1930-31," from the King.

They were Mr. Lawrence Richard Wager, Mr. John Robert Ryland, Mr. Quintin Riley, Mr. Alfred Stephenson, and Mr. Frederick Spencer Chapman.

KOWLOON—THE HOME OF HOCKEY

The Interport—And The Jats

(By Our Kowloon Correspondent)

Although no definite arrangements have been made, there is every prospect of a triangular in-terport between Hongkong, Macao and Canton being held either at Chinese New Year or at Easter.
The idea of inviting other clubs—
Singapore, Shanghai, Swatow, Manila—was discussed at a recent meeting of the Hongkong Hockey Association but, it is understood, some hitch has arisen which would prevent any such matches being held this season.

However, if we have the games between Hongkong, Canton, Macao as a "bully-off" it will do much towards furthering the interests of the game in Hongkong.

It is a peculiar fact that one always associates hockey with Kowloon. The reason is not far to seek, for although there are a number of teams in Hongkong, the peninsula is the recognised "home" of this particular form of sport, as the most important games are held there.

For more years than I can remember, the Indian regiment stationed in Kowloon have made hockey their chief—and in some cases the only—form of sport, and that is why more hockey games are played in Kowloon than in Hongkong. The shortage of ground on the Hongkong side also contribute to this state of affairs.

Talking about Indian regiments reminds me that the Jats are leaving the Colony by the s.s. Talma after a stay of three years with us.
They are going to Jhelum, India, and I take this opportunity of bidding them goodbye. During their service in Hongkong they have proved themselves to be the foremost unit hockey team here and with their departure the Army will lose a galaxy of talent. Lieut.
Syer, centre-forward, Jalil, and Habib, inside forwards Abbas Ali, left-back and Sirdar Khan centre-half are just five of the most prominent players who have stood out in many first class games. I am sure everyone will be sorry to see them go and will join me in wishing them every success on the sports field, in hockey especially, at Jhelum. It is a pity that they should have to leave just as we are about to have these interport games and their players would no doubt be a tower of strength to the local team.

Mary and Her Shorts

"I have no objection at all to the donning of shorts by young and suitably proportioned ladies, but when it comes to going round our courses behind over generously proportioned members of the fair sex clad in this attire, I find it extremely difficult to keep my eye where it should be—on the ball." Stanley
H. Dodwell.

When Mary wore a harem skirt
And it was split in half,
Who cared a damn for Mary's lamb
When you could see her calf.

When Mary wore her husband's shorts
There was an awful strife,
For flesh and bone of eighteen store
Showed rather more than calf.

Pa fumed and said he couldn't keep
His eye upon the ball;
Mary's pillow, shorts so billowy
Made all the golfer's fall.

Billowy girls please try to slim
Each in a wondrous way,
In body grow slight in limb get light
If golf in shorts you play.

Kindly hearts and Norman blood
Will win out by-and-by,
Matrons' obese in shorts will cease
To tempt poor Stanley's eye.
Mary must be careful now
Think of a mere male's nerves:
Figures billowy, diet till willowy
Eliminate your curves. "g."

THEFT OF A BLANKET

Constable Gets Six Weeks

A Shantung constable, charged before Mr. Wynne Jones yesterday with the theft of a blanket belonging to another constable, pleaded guilty. Sentence of six weeks' hard labour was passed.

Mr. W. La B. Sparrow, A.S.P., told the Court that defendant, who was attached to the Mongkok Police Station, was on duty between midnight and 4 a.m. on December 17. Complainant, D242, was also on duty during these hours, and they returned to the station together. Complainant then found a red woollen blanket to be missing from his bed. He suspected defendant and accused him of having stolen it.

After an argument between the two, defendant took complainant

EUCARIST CONGRESS IN MANILA

To Be Held In 1936

Vatican City, Dec. 14.
Archbishop Michael O'Doherty's leading part in obtaining the consent of the Eucharist congress committee to hold the 1936 Congress at Manila came to light today after Pope Pius received him and 40 pilgrims from the Philippines.

At the committee session other speakers expressed doubt that Manila could accommodate the immense throng from all over the world that always attends the congresses, but the archbishop convin-cingly outlined the city's capabilities to receive the visitors.

The committee has decided to hold the 1936 Congress at the Philippine capital, representing the first time any city in the Orient has been so honoured, but the formal announcement by tradition will be delayed until after the 1934 Congress at Buenos Aires.

Members of the party received by the Pope said he expressed much interest in a campaign to give religious instruction in the public schools of Manila and especially blessed the archdiocese authorities for helping the poor during a period of unemployment distress.

The pontiff thanked the Philippine party for making the long pilgrimage and expressed pleasure that they would be here for the anniversary of the Virgin of Guadalupe, and the canonization of Sainte Bernadette Soubirous.

He urged them, in giving his blessing to strive to make an outstanding success of the 1936 Eucharistic Congress.

Bishop Sandoz, of Vigan, Iloos Sor, accompanied the pilgrims, who arrived from Manila aboard an Italian liner which made a special trip from Hongkong to embark them.

to a stall in Mongkok where the blanket was found. Subsequent inquiries revealed that the defendant had returned to the station at 3 a.m. and took the blanket out with the idea of pawning it later.

Mr. Sparrow said defendant had been in the Force for nine months and bore a good record until recently. Now he had nine reports pending against him.

Asked why he had stolen the blanket, defendant said he was feeling cold at 3 a.m. and he went back to the station to get the blanket to cover himself.

His Worship: Don't make it worse, young man.

GLIMPSE OF THE PAST

Belilios Public
School Play

"The journey to the Western Paradise" was the name of the play acted at King's College last night. The story is, a nut shell relates the adventures of Tong Sam Tsing, a Buddhist, who took a long journey to India to fetch some sacred books for the Emperor of China. He was accompanied by the Monkey Fairy, the Pig Fairy and a priest Sha. The monkey becomes entangled in the plot and is made to accompany the Buddhist as a penalty.

In the prologue the Monkey appears and by his queer and quaint ways, soon impresses his personality on the audience. In the first scene we are transplanted to China as it was many years ago.
Sumptuous dresses, the old courtesy, the dignified presence the immobile faces all bring remembrance of a day that is gone and as we watch the graceful dance of the two soldiers there is perhaps a shadow of regret.

While plodding on their way to the Western Paradise the travellers come across a widow, who, by her charms and wiles, soon wins the heart of the pig-fairy who wants to marry one of her daughters but is unable to choose which of the three he prefers. In the very act of choosing they disappear and he is left alone bound with a cord.

Next morning he is set free by the rest of the party who find him and after a good piece of advice he continues on his way with the rest.

Among the numerous visitors present were Sir Thomas and Lady Sonthorn, Mr. A. E. Wood, S.O.A.,
The Hon. Dr. R. H. Kotewall, the Hon. Dr. S. W. T'si, Mr. and Mrs.
A. O. Brown, Rev. and Mrs. Wells,
Dr. and Mrs. Pope, Major and Mrs. H. B. E. Dowling and Miss
Dowling, Mr. Collicott, Mr. R.
Stock, Dr. Woo, M. B. E. and Mr.
V. P. Law.

The music was rendered by Mr.
Poc Yee Tai and contributed largely to the success of the drama.

KOWLOON— WEDDING

Purvis—Hall

A pretty wedding took place at St. Theresa's Church, Kowloon
Tong, on Saturday afternoon when Miss Dorothy Hall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Hall, of Gatehead-on-Tyne, became the bride of Mr.
John Murray Purvis, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Purvis, of Walker-on-Tyne. The Rev. Father Spada officiated.

The bride, who wore a dress of ivory satin with bridal veil, and carried a bouquet of pink roses and pink gladioli, was given away by Mr. Thomas Coleman.

Her bridesmaid, Miss Ena Allen, wore a dress of old gold satin, with hat and shoes to match, and carried a bouquet of bronze chrysanthemums.

Little Miss Isabelle Spooner, the flower girl, who was dressed in pale blue satin with pink roses, and shoes and hat to match, carried a basket of rose petals, while the page, Master Billy Carr, was dressed in pale blue satin, with white ruff.

Mrs. Thomas Coleman, the Matron of Honour, wore a dress of flowered georgette with hat and shoes to match.

Mr. M. E. Purvis, brother of the bridegroom, performed the duties of best man.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Carr, 289 Prince Edward Road, attended by about 80 guests. After the reception the happy couple left for their new home, the bride's going away dress being a black pin-stripe costume, with fox fur, and hat to match.

The Toy Department of the JADE TREE,

everyone can come to see the display of Christmas gifts, no matter how busy he may be in the day time.
